

ISLAMIC PSYCHOLOGY

In today's social climate, it has become imperative to provide psycho-social support for Muslims. However, this support must be offered from a perspective that is compatible with religious principles. Islam teaches that the heart has an impact on the psyche and nafs (soul). Consequently, psychology taught from an Islamic perspective focuses on the Quranic view of controlling one's inward desires. As Allah Almighty stated, "... We have created humankind and know what their nafs whispers to them ..." (Surah Qaf (50):16). Studying psychology from an Islamic point of view equips you to help others with diseases of the heart and soul.
